By now it is no Sega jumped the gun and brought out their new Saturn game sys some three months before their "official" launch date. When asked why. Seea officials gave various reasons including beating Sony to the stores, the system was ready, and they wanted to test the waters to see how well a $400 system would be received by the gaming public.

Concentrating on the last reason, one would wonder what type of response Seva really expected to get. They are apparently pleased that the but that shouldn't have been a big surprise because there are 10 times that amount of players that would do anything to get a U.S. Saturn-at any price.

These "early adapters" are the ones who have to be the first one on the block to own the new system. I'm one of them. It would seem to be quite difficult to do any type of research that would help Sega form conclusions as to how the system would do when there are other new machines in the stores selling for less money. The sample would be -toward Seen. Still the statisticians are cranking out numbers and the suits will probably make marketing decisions based on the test, Bad? Probably not, Then why test market (albeit nationwide)? Well, it worked quite well for Nintendo back in 1985 when they brought back the concept of home video games. Plus, there is the positive pre-exposure that would help sell the system when it launches in Scotember So if it so great, why don't all the hardware manufacturers do it? with their Jaguar, And Sony almost did it with their PlayStation, Almost? A couple of months are we saw the PlayStation up on the computers at a major tetail chain. That is how we knew that the Satura would come out before their amounced Sentember launch date. The problem is, after a week on the store computers, the record for the system disappeared as fast as it appeared. Second thoughts? Perhaps. Also Sony could be looked on And what about Nintendo? They just might test market the system this Christmas. Since the system will lnanch with a couple of titles in Japan in December, Nantondo could surprise everybody and still make some bucks in the peak Christmas season, Also, since Nintendo mysteriously pulled out of the Winter CES-the time when they would want to finally display the real system to the retailers, one would wonder what Nintendo is up to. Only time will tell

The Super NES, Genesis and PlayStation will be battling this holiday season for the best trans lation of the arcade smash, Mortal Kombat 3. ### READER FRUSTRATED BY ULTRA 64 DELAYS

Dear FGM

First of all, I'd 1ke to congratulate you on your excellent work on the magazine. Second, I'd like to express my feelings about Nintendo regarding their uncoming vaporware: the Ultra 64. Here is what I have to say to Nintendo: What kind of fool do you take me for? All you ever do is fill my poor little head with empty promises. You tell me

Bet you're really sweating now that you don't have their help on the games, huh? Mmmm, American-made video games, vummvi And what's it going to be? CD-ROM? Cartridge? Your date switch to April 1996 seems like an attempt to rethink the whole thing. Could it be you were planning to make it cartridge-based only to realize that the competition (Sony, 3DO, Sega) had the right idea all along? Screen shots of some rendered Robotech crud just doesn't float my boat! Oh goodle, it has four joystick ports. That's probably the only good thing we may or may not know about the Ultra. Is Sony starting to make you sweat? They should, they have nothing to lose and everything to gain. They have lots of things to fall back on if their game system fails. Televisions.

NINTENDO A NO SHOW AT WINTER CES

Nintendo recently sent out a press release stafing that they will not be having a booth at the Winter Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas this coming

January This was the show where they had planned to debut the Ultra 64 system in North America before its April launch

The release stated that they still plan to unveil the Ultra 64 to the world in November at the Shoshinkai show in Japan and the Ultra Famicom will go on sale Dec. 1. You can be sure the lines will be long

The fact still remains that not everyone will travel to Japan to see the unit and Nintendo still needs to showcase it before it launches in April

Earlier this year we here at EGM predicted that the Littre 64 would not be launched before the Sho shinkai show in Japan and that a 1995 launch of the Ultra 64 wasn't likely Two of the biggest reasons why the Ultra isn't going to be ready this

Christmas include the fact that Nintendo of Japan has never released a new hardware system outside of Japan first, Second, several games that Nintendo's allstar programmer Shigeru Miyamoto is developing would not have been ready. Mr. Yamauchi, president of NO.1 did not want to launch the Ultra without any software ready from Miyamoto. the man who created and Panasonic's main goal is cost, so their M2 will be a separate unit, thus allowing any 3DO unit to fit on top of the M2 technology. The piggy-backing of the new device will be much like what Sega did with the first version of the Sega CD. One interesting observation that we made is the fact that there are now two controller ports on Panasonic's new M2 unit. supposting that perhaps players are not entirely pleased

Both units are scheduled to be released sometime later this year at an unannounced price point. Some insiders are speculating that the Goldstar M2 unit may cost anywhere from $149 to $249. while the Panasonic unit will cost between $149 and $199 These prices may fluctuate depending on the yen/dollar

SEGA'S 16-BIT HAND-HELD NOW NAMED NOMAD

ogs changed the name of their now 16-Bit coor hand-held device code named Venus to the Normal-Held Genice code named Venus to the Normal. #ECRIF © Quartermann reported the nexes to you first at leve short mothers ago. The 16-Bit Normal color portable will be available in early 1986 for between 1548 and 1519. The Normal will play Canesis games and will allow gamens to tals being garning above on the road and play their favorite 16-Bit Genesis games in much the same way they do now within the Game Gear.

The only change is now you will be able to play all of your favorite 16-Bit Genesis titles on the Nomad. There's even a cable in the works that will allow you to hook up your Nomad to three of your friends' units. The control of the four players will need to have a Nomad and have the same game inserted into their unit.

Very few details are being released about the Nomad, but we have learned that it may make an appearance before Christmas in select markets. The name screen will have a similar look, feel and resolution to the one used on the Turbo Express. Some insiders are suggesting that gamers will be able to play games they have in their current Game Geer Ibranes. Sega will accomplish this by introducing a separate decose similar to Mintendo's Supre Game Boy. This unit has been in the works for some time and it will allow you to play your Game Geer games on your Sega Genesis.

The Normad will have a bigger screen than the current Game Gear and it will have a new ergonomic design similar to the prototype pictured above that was design similar to the prototype pictured above that was described to us by Sega.

The larger screen and the high-resolution miniature monitor will make the Nomad a sure-fire hit for gamers and airport travelers alike.

Still to be determined is how Sega will solve the battery problem as the 16-Bit CPU plus the LCD Screen are known to be very tough on batteries.

JAGUAR VR HEADSET:

FACT OR FICTION

The most important news coming out of the Atari camp in recent weeks is the drop in price of the Jaquar to $149 as well as the fact that the Jaguar CD system is in production. We got a chance to try the Jaguar virtualreality headset developed jointly by Atari and Virtuality (a world leader in commercial virtual reality), and it is due out later this year. Many gaming insiders doubted that Atarl would be able to set up a VR system that gives a true virtualreality experience. But they've managed to do both.

It won't come cheap, as some are suggesting a $300 nace point home VR system and

now. But when Nintendo decided to port over Killer Instinct for the arcade and bring it out on the Super NES, GTE and Nintendo rethought their 16-Bit plans and decided it would be best to bring out their fighting game on the PC CD-ROM format instead

FX Fighter is a fast-moving. polygon-rendered fighter featuring nine extraterrestrial fighters from eight different allen worlds It has a unique Two-player Game Option complete with handicapping so that if your opponent is great, you can lessen his skills in order to be competitive or vice versa

Each of the characters was created by using motion-capture animation, with over 360 moves each performed by real martial artists. Each character has close to 50 attacks. You'll be able to create fighting techniques, strategies and tactics based on a variety of perspectives and you can view the fight from several different angles FX Fighter is the first game ever to use BRender, a unique accelerated, 3-D rendering technology developed by Argonaut

Well, it had to be done sooner or later! Namco has combined the noivgon/texture-mapping technology of such games as Tekken and Ridge Racer with a multiplayer, motorcycle racing game (a la Suzuka 8 Hours) to come up with Cyber Cycles, Head-tohead racing hardly gets more realistic. You can go it alone if you like, but it's much more fun to get some friends in on the action.

Each racer is distinguished by one of four distinct colors, so there is no question as to whom you are diving a friendly nudge at 180 mph. There is no word yet as to whether there will be a choice of bikes (that would be nice), but there is certain to be several tracks to race through. You'll need to keep ahead of the pack to keep racing; a good time will give you extended play.

If you're a racing fan, this is one not to be missed. Bring your friends to the arcade and enjoy the latest in simulated speed!

texture-mapped roadside scenes in Cyber Cycles are similar to the kind used in the hit Ridge Racer. The virtual reality-like cycles respond to the movements of the player. ### FACT-FILE World Heroes Perfect By SNK/ADK

Eight levels of difficulty

Belease Date: Should be at an arcade near you

On the heels of Fatal Fury 3 and Savage Reign comes another fighting game for the Neo+Geo. World Heroes Perfect is the latest in the World Heroes series, and it has some important new features that really make a difference. Although there aren't any new characters to choose from, you will face some Bosses from past WH games.

Speaking of new features, the one that is most apparent is the addition of a Power-up Meter, which starts to fill every time you hit an opponent Once it is full, you have two options: You can execute one of your special moves (if it is one that takes advantage of your power gauge it will do extra damage) or if your life bar is more than half empty, you can execute your Crazy Death Blow, which is similar to a Fatal move (a la Fatal Fury 2 and 3), but much more impressive Along with impressive new backgrounds, each character has an ABC move, a projectile destruction move and defensive attacks. All in all, it's an impressive sequel!

Jason Morgan

The Crazy Death blows can only be done with a full Power Meter and a flashing Life Bar, Right Janne is doing her Angel Arrow which is sure to defeat J. Carn if he doesn't block it. Janne will have to charge up her meter after this move

Many of the special moves have been redrawn. Captain Kidd's Pirate Ship (upper left) is brighter and more streamlined. Also, a few new moves have been added, ch as Rasputin's Thunder Ball (lower right)

World Heroes Perfect retains the excellent playability of World Heroes Two Jet and adds some nice features. The Crazy Death Blows are impressive to watch as well as easy to execute. The three strongest characters from the previous game (Ryofu, Captain Kidd and Jack) have all been weakened, allowing for a greater overall Bison is back as a Boss, yet not against everyone. Part of what makes SFA different is that you fight a different Boss depending on who you play as. Bison is more powerful (one of the few inconsistencies with the story line since they all lose powers in Street Fighter II) as he has a teleport, a fireball and he looks a bit more buff as well! These powers come straight out of the anime, as do many of the voices in the game and what they say. Bison is pretty tough but he's not impossible. Any good Guile player wil be able to find the right combo to beat him.

PlayStation Fighting
Once again Capcom churns out another fighting game. However, this time it's not fly up or Ken but popular characters from the X-Mon comic books!

The popular coin-op is headed in your direction—that is, if you plan on getting a PlayStation or Sega Status. Large graphics, large stages and even larger fights made this game a popular coin-munchor at the local areade. Those same attributes should be translated faithfully to the home versions with the exception, of course, of the coinmunching. As with all other Capcom fighting games, you can expect superior graphics and catchy, yet loose, game play. One new aspect Capcom added includes a larger arena, allowing players to battle high up. Players can now block in the air as well. These features add another dimension to the already intense game play. New combos and techniques await those who try to find them.

Several major Marvet characters decorate the Character Select Screen, including the popular Magneto and a special Sentimel untile any series on the comic books! Game play should be similar to its arcade countlengant, using a refurbished version of a decaying Street Fighter ongine. Special moves are large and abundant, Identical to those exhibited in the strades.

Don't misunderstand; the game is great, and the super moves are excellent. In 1994. ### BASEBALL '95 (32X)

I'd sooner sit on the bench and give someone a hot foot or soit sunflower seeds at my teammates than play this game. The game looks good and the many stadium sounds add to the realism of this game. But what it makes up for in sound, it lacks in game play and overall fun factor. I just couldn't get into this game. I just wasn't

'm sorry to say that I wasn't impressed by this 32X upgrade. The looks are very appealing, and sound effects you might bear in the stadium add some life, but the overall performance of the game is not where it should be. The playability of the game is not up to par. Sure, the Al has improved, but gamers still want to have some challeng in these types of games.

WWF RAW (32X) BY ACCLAIM

If you're a fan of the WWF and own a 32X, give this game a try. If not, don't worry about it. The play control is sloppy and the computer is hard to beat unless you put the difficulty setting really low. I was disappointed by a number of aspects of this game, including the sound. which on the 32X is sup posed to be improved. I go sore fingers tapping away on the control pad and losing.

Tap, tap, tap, tap, (pause) tap, tap, tap win! Despite the enhancements of the sounds and graphics that the 32X can handle, the tapping of the buttons is what the game's based on. There's no point in playing. Plus, the computer is quite hard to beat unless you put the difficulty setting on 1, then maybe you'll have a chance. You better indulge on some sugar before you

SLAM & IAM '95 (3DO) BY CRYSTAL DYNAMICS

Crystal Dynamics has brought the thunder with authority. I really enjoyed this fantastic basketball simulation. The only thing missing is an NBA Player's Association of an NBA team license, but that's the only disappointing thing about this game. The game play makes up for this minor failing and the voice of Van Earl Wright is awesome. If you enjoy basketball games and don't own a 3DO, buy one.

The next generation of basketball gaming has arrived. The 3-D perspective of the court and the players blow me away. Even though it doesn't have an NRA license, it still has stats of every player and real court regulations. Use screens. double teams and isolation plays on the fly. This is by far the best 3-D basketball I've seen on the market. It's a definite buy for all basketball gamers.

has different secondary weapons. T-Bone has a bazooka that can blast through walls. Razor has a jet pack that allows him to fly over obstacles. PLAYER'S NOTES:

FIRST IMPRESSION Another cartoon-turned-gamehow exciting. Although the prospect of playing another one of this genre didn't excite me. I was surprised by how well this game was done BEST FEATURE I really liked the way you receive new weapons. You gain experience for eventhing you kill, and once you reach levels that are multiples of five, you get a new weapon This is also the way you gain more life and get stronger.

WHAT'S MISSING The weapons may look different than one another but they all do the same thing. This really cuts down on the incentive to go after hard-to-reach bonuses.

WILL YOU LIKE IT? If you like the TV show then there should be no research why you wouldn't like it. The levels are arge and some of them are kinds hard to figure out. It would have been nice to be able to change characters in between levels. -David Ruchain
